

impact by the numbers

See the impact Alachua Habitat for Humanity made throughout our community last year.

we built 5 homes to provide affordable housing to families in Alachua County

we handed the keys to our 146th
homeowner

all homes were built by AHFH homeowners and volunteers

none were given away
— all homeowners pay an affordable mortgage

we generated more tax revenue for the government

$166,242
paid in property taxes by AHFH homeowners

we brought the community together to make a difference

1,595
volunteers worked
17,729 hours

75
local Greater Duval residents now active in efforts to revitalize their neighborhood

we reduced waste

310
tons of material diverted from the waste stream

we made vital repairs to homes with severely inadequate living conditions

14 families served through our Critical Home Repair program

we made 22,360 ReStore transactions

100%
of ReStore proceeds supported AHFH affordable housing programs

we empowered our people

The families in our homeownership program don't want to be given anything. They want the opportunity to move into a safe, healthy home they can afford. Alachua Habitat for Humanity brings donors and volunteers together to help families build their own home from the ground up—building hope, strength, and community in the process.

building more than homes

Alachua Habitat for Humanity's homeownership program provides working families, who would not otherwise qualify for traditional mortgages, the opportunity to own a home.

When we make a safe, affordable place to live for a family, it creates a ripple effect in our community. Children grow up with a sense of security, previously vacant lots generate property taxes, and neighborhoods are strengthened as people come together to help one another.

Nearly one in three households in Alachua County struggle to pay their housing costs each month.

Like nearly all Habitat homeowners, Toccarra, Deosha, and Shenika (pictured on front, left to right) were no different. They lived with their children either in overcrowded housing shared with extended family, too-small apartments they could barely afford, or in neighborhoods where they didn't feel safe.

But with the help of our homeownership program, Toccarra, Deosha, and Shenika now own houses they can afford, living next door to each other, in a community they literally built themselves.

Like 137 other Habitat homeowners, they are a testament to the strength, stability and self-reliance that grows from living in a home that is healthy and affordable.

we empower our community to help lift their neighbors up, and empower families to write their own futures.
